

Graduation and Completion Rates for Initial and Advanced Programs of Study

The first table below provides a three-year analysis of graduation rates for the academic years 2016-17, 2017-18, and 2018-19. These rates, per the description, are predicated upon an estimated time of degree completion based upon number of credits and years of enrollment. Both initial certification and advanced programs data are provided. With a goal of 80%, NDMU continues to meet or exceed this goal. Although the rate of Advanced Graduates does not meet this same threshold, enrollees are more self-regulated and not under any timeline to graduate; i.e., there is much more flexibility.

The second table below provides a three-year analysis of completion rates for the academic years 2016-17, 2017-18, and 2018-19. These rates are provided, based upon number of credits and years of enrollment, for those who are enrolled in non-degree programs of study. With a goal of 80%, NDMU continues to meet or exceed this goal as well. Although the rate of Advanced Graduates does not meet this same threshold, enrollees are more self-regulated and not under any timeline to graduate; i.e., there is much more flexibility for those seeking advanced certifications.
